Dean’s Report for
IU School of Medicine

2012-2013
2012-2013 School Profile

This report captures the many ways faculty and students from the IU School of Medicine (MED) were involved in CSL programs and curriculum-based community engagement during the 2012-2013 academic year. The report is a summary of information for your school based on campus data gathered through the registrar as well as our own records. Information about the data collection process, how the information is used, and a more complete report for the entire campus is available on our website. The CSL hopes that this information is shared with your faculty and used to support your case as civically engaged school.

Invariably, we have missed information that could be included, and apologize for any omission. Should you have questions or want to discuss how you might use this information for academic or strategic planning purposes, please contact Mary Price, Director of Faculty Development (price6@iupui.edu).

Sam H. Jones Community Service Scholarship Recipients

Table 1.1 lists the students from your school who were awarded a Sam H. Jones (SHJ) Community Service Scholarship from the CSL. The SHJ scholarship program was established to recognize students who have made exemplary contributions to the community while fostering their leadership and continued commitment to community engagement. These service scholars are central to supporting the campus mission for civic engagement. For more information about the various awards CSL has available, visit our website (http://csl.iupui.edu/financial-support/scholarships/index.shtml).

Award Recipients

IUPUI recognizes graduating students who have shown exemplary commitment to their communities by awarding the William M. Plater Civic Engagement Medallion. In addition to this award, students who participate in our programs are often recognized for their civic engagement through other campus awards and leadership positions (e.g., Top 100, Undergraduate Student Government). Table 1.2 gives recognition to civically engaged students from your school.

Table 1.2 includes students who participated in CSL programs and also received an award for their commitment to civic engagement while at IUPUI.

CSL Supported Faculty/Staff

The CSL offers a range of activities to support faculty and staff with their community-engaged teaching, research, and service (e.g., Course Development Grants, Dissemination Grants, Communities of Practice). One of our largest programs, the Service Learning Assistant Scholarship Program (SLA), is available to support faculty and staff work associated with community-engaged scholarly practice. Scholarships are awarded to faculty and staff, who if funded, select a student as the recipient of the scholarship. It is expected that such support will enhance faculty/staff community-engaged scholarly practice, provide high quality student mentoring opportunities, and build capacity for sustainable, mutually beneficial community-campus partnerships.

Table 1.3 lists the faculty and staff from the IU School of Medicine who received financial support for their community-engaged teaching, research, or service from the CSL. Faculty who received SLA funding were asked to identify whether the funding was to advance their teaching, research, service, or build capacity within their unit (as indicated in the table as “T, R, S, or CB”) as reflected below.
